

The relationship of family values and to choose the form of building family relationships in adolescence

E. S. Strukova

Bachelor degree of Psychology Department at the International University of Nature, Society and Human «Dubna»
struchochek@mail.ru

A study to examine the relationship of motivation in family values, the level of involvement and to choose the form of family relations. The object of the study are young people aged 20 to 23 years old, studying in the daytime in higher education, consisting of family relationships at the stage of pre-marital intercourse, a formal marriage and honeymoon. The total number of subjects was 90 people, 45 girls and 45 boys. Under this theme were discussed concepts such as adolescence, family values, family relations and their forms, the motivation coming into family relationships, involvement in family relationships, vitality.

Key words: family relations, adolescence, family values, involvement in family relationships.